

On... A Planetary Court of Justice

by William W Morgan

There is much talk these days about trying politicians for their crimes. And some are being tried. There is talk about the proper courts and venues for such trials. Whether the criminals should be tried in their own political entity or in some supposedly “neutral” political entity.

There is often talk about “justice”. But usually without defining it. If there is a definition it is quite long, not absolute and not very clear and useful. There is talk of the possible penalties for the criminal. Usually this is either imprisonment for “life” or to be executed.

There is rarely thought of doing something that will prevent recurrence of the crime. Feeling that these things—the offenses—will inevitably happen. Perhaps because it is in the nature of the specie Homo sapiens. Which is not true.

It is not in the nature of “man”, the specie. But in the defective societal system we have adopted for ourselves. Which allows for—even requires—retribution. Creating a closed-loop of violence and retribution. But we can get rid of this system and adopt one that works. That is easy.

As with all problems, it only requires the validation for rightness of the knowledge we are using. And, when that fails, the creation of new and useful knowledge to replace the failed hypotheses. And the implementation of this new and useful knowledge.

We have no single, moral and rational system of justice on this planet. One appropriate for all members of a thinking specie. In every political régime more criminals get away than are caught. And even the definition of what constitutes a crime is relative to the régime. Worse, our adopted societal system is itself a crime against humanity.

When a criminal is caught they are locked up at enormous expense to the victims, executed, or go free within a short time. In all cases, there is never restitution for victims. The criminal, the victim or society does not receive justice. There is a simple solution to this that does not require a political police, court or prison system. Plus one that ensures restitution for crimes. On... a Planetary Court of Justice describes such a system.

The solution only require intellectual honesty. Meaning that when cherished fallacies are shown to be incorrect, that they are no longer accepted and used. Read about it...
